State Develops High Yielding Grains

In an effort to provide sources of seed supply of high yielding varieties of grains the College of Agriculture is inspecting fields of Kanred wheat, Nebraska Improved No. 63 and improved No. 23 wheat, Nebraska Improved No. 21 oats, and Rosen rye. Farmers growing these grains will be asked to sell a part or all their crop for seed purposes. They will receive market price or better. As the result of several years experiments at the Nebraska Agricultural Experiment Station high yielding grains have been developed and an effort is now being made to have all farmers possible to grow these superior varieties. Nebraska No. 60 wheat, for instance, has averaged a yield of 35 bushels for several years at the experiment station at Lincoln. It and Kanred, which was developed in Kansas, yield practically the same. Kanred shows a tendency to ripen a day or two earlier than the Nebraska wheat. Nebraska Improved No. 28 ripens eight to ten days earlier than Kanred or any other winter wheat. It also outyields any other wheat by a good margin. Its weakness, however, is its tendency to winterkill. The college is pushing Nebraska Improved No. 60 wheat, which shows a tendency to outyield other varieties and which goes through the winter as well as any. Nebraska Improved No. 21 oats has proven eight bushels to the acre better than local varieties. Rosen rye, a Michigan product, shows decided superior yielding qualities over ordinary varieties.

At Seventy She Gains 20 Pounds

"TANLAC HAS BROUGHT ME HEALTH AND HAPPINESS," SAYS MRS. MARY NOBLE.

"I am now seventy years of age but I have actually gained twenty pounds in weight in just a few weeks of time," declared Mrs. Mary Noble of 914 South Seventh street, West Cedar Rapids, Iowa, a few days ago.

"During the past ten years," continued Mrs. Noble, "I have suffered all the misery that goes with stomach trouble and nervousness. I had to be extremely careful about what I ate for even the lightest kind of food, such as milk toast, sometimes made me nauseated so I was unable to keep it down. Often I became almost deathly sick and I could taste my food for hours afterwards. Gas would form on my stomach and press around my heart so that it palpitated terribly and I got so short of breath I often thought I would suffocate. At night I would lie down to bed, for when I would lie down I felt like I was going to smother. My nerves were in a wretched condition and at night I would get so restless I could not lie in bed and would have to get up and walk the floor. As a result I began to lose in weight and I kept falling off until I lost about twenty pounds and was no more than a shadow of my former self. I was almost a wreck and the little housework I could do was a drudgery and I became so discouraged I saw little pleasure in life."

"About two months ago I started taking Tanlac and it is just wonderful how it began to build me up right from the start. My appetite returned and my troubles gradually left me until today I have gained back all my lost weight and am once more enjoying splendid health. It makes no difference what I eat I can digest it properly and my heart action is normal and my breathing is free and easy. My nerves are steady, my sleep is sound and restful and every morning I get up feeling refreshed and with plenty of energy. Tanlac has given me health, strength and happiness and I know of no better way to show my gratitude than by telling others about it so they may benefit by my experience."

Tanlac is sold in Dakota City by Neiswanger Pharmacy, in South Sioux City by McBeath's Pharmacy, in Homer by Brassfield & Jensen.—Advertisement.

Potato Men Plan Marketing Exchange

In order to provide better methods of distributing the Nebraska potato crop, growers and others meeting at Alliance recently voted to establish a central potato exchange, with branch exchanges or associations located throughout the potato belt.

The central exchange will keep in touch with dealers and others handling potatoes and thereby provide ready sources of disposal for the local exchanges. The task of organizing the local associations will begin at once and it is hoped to have the system working in time to handle this year's crop.

The meeting was attended by potato growers, officers of the Nebraska Potato Improvement association, representatives of the College of Agriculture, representatives of commercial interests, and others interested in the development of the potato industry.

How Would You Like to Harvest Two Crops of Corn a Year as They Do in the Philippines?

No, reader, this corn was not grown by one of our local farmers! It wasn't grown in the United States, even. It was grown in the faroff Philippine Islands by Filipino schoolboys. Two fine crops of corn a year are produced in the Islands.

The Philippines are doing some wonderful things in the agricultural line. The Philippine government has fine agricultural schools throughout the islands, and the Philippine legislature, composed entirely of Filipinos, is each year making larger and larger appropriations for this important work.

The staple food of the islands is rice, but corn is coming right along in popular favor. Its use was given great impetus in the last year because of a rice shortage. Other important Philippine crops are hemp, sugar cane, coconuts, coffee, tobacco and pineapples. Lumber is also an important industry.

There are hundreds of thousands of acres of land lying idle in the Philippines, which have a greater area of fertile land than Japan—this in spite of the fact that the population of the Philippines is 11,000,000 while that of Japan is around 55,000,000. There is every reason to believe that some day the Philippines will have a population as large as that of Japan today. The Filipinos are the only Christian people in the orient, and their young men are working night and day to prepare themselves for the responsibility of citizenship in the Philippine Republic, which they believe to be near at hand.
